Welcome note by Pascal Couchepin,
President of the Swiss Confederation

2003 WorldSkills Competition, St.Gallen

This is now the second time that St.Gallen welcomes young people from all over the world, putting their skills and expertise to the test in an atmosphere of friendly competition. I would like to welcome you all to Switzerland for this unique international exchange. However, it is not just the young competitors and the experts from 37 countries that make this event unique – we must not forget the many contributors helping out behind the scenes. I would therefore like to take this opportunity to also thank the organization committee and to show our appreciation of their work. In just two years, they have managed to put together this international display of trades with more than 1,500 participants. Thanks to a combined effort by the Swiss Confederation and the canton and town of St.Gallen, together with the Swiss trade associations and partners from the business community, the World Skills Competition has come to St.Gallen for the second time.

Two-thirds of young people in Switzerland choose to start their career with an apprenticeship – which is precisely why the WorldSkills Competition holds such an interesting and important position here. First for the competitors, who have an opportunity to display the quality of their skills in international competition, and secondly for the representatives of the Confederation, the cantons, the municipalities and of business, who get to see the fruit of their cooperative efforts in vocational training. The apprenticeship route is the right choice, guaranteeing that Switzerland, with its dual training system, will be in a position to meet the international challenges of the future too. For the business community, this unique event shows that all these highly motivated and talented youngsters, passionate about their work, are willing to play a role in and influence the future of their various trades.

I would like to thank all the participants, the supervisors, the experts, the organizers and, not least, the spectators for their interest and commitment, and I wish you all an exciting few days here in St. Gallen.

Pascal Couchepin
President of the Swiss Confederation

Welcome note by Jack Dusseldorp, WorldSkills President

All Competitors in WorldSkills are winners

On behalf of the Board of WorldSkills I extend to you all a warm welcome to St.Gallen! Thanks to our hosts, Minister Hans Ulrich Stöckling, and Dr. Armin Mühlematter and his very capable team, we are assured of world class preparation, organisation and hospitality for our 37th international competition event; by far the largest we have ever held.

And thanks to our 37 member countries, we are assured of a very committed and talented group of some 1,500 competitors and accompanying experts who will make this truly a world class event. Arriving as individual members of separate teams to compete for their trade and country; we know from past events, that all competitors and experts will return home from St.Gallen as equal members of the larger WorldSkills movement, a growing movement of people and organisations which aim to raise the skill standards and prestige of trade vocations across the world.

For these 700 young people – among the best from 37 countries - WorldSkills is as much a 'rite of passage' as it is a competition, for it enables each of them to grow in confidence and become aware of their potential as leaders in their respective vocations, and in the communities in which they live and work. Regardless of the medal results, all competitors in WorldSkills are winners.

Similarly, those countries which properly invest in skilling their youth will be among the winners in the global economic competition. Switzerland is clearly one such country where the importance of equipping young people with the skills to contribute to the wealth and well being of society is properly recognised.

Jack Dusseldorp
WorldSkills President

Welcome note by Hans Ulrich Stöckling, Education Minister, President of the Swiss Foundation for International Youth Skills Competitions

Vocational training – backbone of the economy

The 37th WorldSkills are a welcome occasion to promote vocational training among the general public. In Switzerland, more than 50,000 apprenticeships are concluded every year. The apprentices are then awarded a certificate of qualification. Also, more than 7,000 of the higher-level Berufsmaturitätszeugnisse are awarded, which corresponds to some 14 per cent of successful apprenticeships. For a vast majority of young people – about 66 per cent – their career starts with one of the approximately 300 recognised trades. This is impressive. These figures show the importance of our dual vocational training system. We are therefore pleased that the best young professionals are meeting at the WorldSkills in St.Gallen. 750 competitors from 37 nations are demonstrating their skills in 40 different trades. In doing so, they are not only providing evidence of their sporting spirit but also testifying to their occupational skills, which are of the greatest significance for the economies of their native countries.

Vocational training is the backbone of the economy – we are convinced of this in Switzerland. Apprenticeships available in trade and industry and in public administration, as well as the opportunities of further education and training offered by a variety of college and university courses and in further vocational training must continue to ensure that vocational training will remain attractive in the future.

The commitment of the young professionals who will compete for medals and honour in St.Gallen should be an incentive in this regard. Visitors to the WorldSkills will be able to see for themselves what high-quality achievements are possible in the various trades. After the brilliant competition of 1997, St.Gallen can now host the WorldSkills for a second time. I would like to welcome you warmly to this event.

Hans Ulrich Stöckling
Education Minister

Welcome note by Dr. Heinz Christen, Major of St.Gallen

Small is beautiful! – welcome to the 37th WorldSkills 2003 in St.Gallen

Birmingham. Amsterdam. Taipai. Lyon. Montreal. Seoul. In among this impressive sequence of previous venues of the international youth skill competitions, the name of St.Gallen appears not once, but twice: in 1997, 550 keen and highly qualified young professionals from all over the world provided evidence of their great skills at this competition in the City of St.Gallen. And they were enthusiastic about the casual, friendly mood among the participants, and the goodwill that was palpable everywhere. The spectators, too, were enthusiastic – they came to the halls of the St.Gallen Olma Trade Fairs in droves in order to see the young professionals at work – often, you could hardly move any more.

St.Gallen makes things possible, in line with our city marketing motto: at short notice, time-tested organisers jumped into the breach when the prospective venue for 2003 revoked its candidacy. The competition of 19-22 June 2003 is supposed to be even bigger than its 1997 predecessor – and preparation work has been correspondingly demanding and time-consuming. We are looking forward to this second WorldSkills in St.Gallen within six years. For pupils, teachers and instructors from the city and its surroundings, this provides a unique opportunity to experience top-class performances by young professionals from 40 recognised trades from all parts of the world at first hand. The WorldSkills are also of importance in view of the envisaged enhancement of the value of dual vocational training, which in our region attracts no less than 70% of all young people, and not least for the image of the city and its region, too.

On behalf of the municipal authorities, I would like to cordially welcome the competitors, delegates, judges, and – I hope – again a large number of spectators to St.Gallen. We may not be an international metropolis – but St.Gallen's charm, open-mindedness and incomparable location between Lake Constance and the Säntis mountain range will provide you with an unforgettable experience – indeed, "small is beautiful!".

Dr. Heinz Christen
Mayor of St.Gallen

Welcome note by Dr. Armin Mühlematter, OC Chairman

St.Gallen is ready once more!

Who would have imagined after the end of the 34th Youth Skills Olympics in July 1997 that this biggest and most important world event in vocational training would return to St.Gallen after a mere six years?

It was only possible to take on the organisation of the 37th WorldSkills at short notice because all the parties involved were spontaneously prepared to support the OC once more. The successful event of 1997 proved to have its positive effects! On behalf of the Organising Committee, I would like to extend my cordial thanks to all our partners for their goodwill. My particular tribute goes to my colleagues in the OC: thanks to their extraordinary commitment and thanks to the fact that most of them were able to bring their experience of the 1997 Youth Skills Olympics to bear, it has been possible to organise the 37th WorldSkills in only two years.

St.Gallen does not have the generous infrastructure of the international cities in which the youth skills competitions were staged in past years. This is why we announced our motto of "small, smart, simple" as early as the presentation of our concept at the Extraordinary General Meeting of WorldSkills in Seoul in March 2001. We have remained faithful to this motto in our preparation work. The aim of our work was to ensure that the approximately 700 young professionals from 37 countries would have the best working conditions that make a fair competition possible. By the same token, we also want to ensure that all our guests feel at ease here with us and will take many positive memories of the 37th WorldSkills back home with them. Visitors will undoubtedly experience a thrilling, high-quality competition.

The OC would like to wish all the young professionals a great deal of success and tenacity. And it should not be forgotten that fair play is not only of high value in sports, but also at the 2003 WorldSkills.

Dr. Armin Mühlematter
Chairman of the Organising Committee

St. Gallen – Metropolis of Eastern Switzerland

In 612 AD., in the middle of a forest, the itinerant Irish monk Gall trips on a thorn bush and decides to found his hermitage on the same spot. The hermitage of Gall the Monk soon became one of the most important monasteries in the West.

A city grew up around it, from the center of which now rises one of the most impressive works of Baroque architecture, the Abbey Church, designated by UNESCO as part of the world's cultural heritage. The spirit of the Benedictine Monks is still perceptible in the Abbey Library which is one of the most beautiful secular Rococo buildings in Switzerland, where you can admire more than 1000 years old original manuscripts.

Today, in the middle of central Europe, where four countries – Switzerland, Germany Austria and the Principality of Liechtenstein – meet, St.Gallen, a city set in green countryside, invites you to linger.

St. Gallen also is a well-known textile and fashion centre and one of the most famous economics universities in Europe is located here: the University of St.Gallen for Business Administration, Economics, Law and Social Sciences. Variety is the very spice of life around the city: on one side is Lake Constance, inviting to a boat trip to the German or Austrian shore; on the other side is the lofty "Alpstein-massiv" with the impressive mount Säntis which offers a view of Germany, Austria and Liechtenstein. And in the middle is St.Gallen – with all varieties of city life!
