foreword of the president

In the continuous travel of our contests Gijon in 1962 was the last Spanish stop. Since then Dublin, Lisbon, Glasgow and Utrecht have been the wonderful and welcoming ports which have received this young and hard-working Embassy that this the International Professional Training Contests.

This year, by kind agreement of the Organising Committee, Spain is once again granted a new run and Madrid is the city which has the honour of receiving the participants of the XVI International Professional Training Contest. Madrid, the capital of Spain by the royal will of Phillip II, the geographical heart of the nation, a welcoming and cordial city, the town in which provinces and regions fuse, will know how to honour its traditional hospitality and the kind, helpful nature of its inhabitants.

Madrid, provincial and cosmopolitan, will be the centre for this new Youth Labour Olympiad, in which 231 young people from 12 countries will strive to obtain the first awards in each one of the 36 professional specialities, which will be classified by 12 commissions made up by 56 experts and ratified, if necessary, by an international Organising Committee made up by 26 members, representing the 12 nations participating.

These small statistics may give an approximate idea of the importance and apparent complexity of this international activity, the organisation of which has been made much easier thanks to the perfect compenetration of the men who direct it striving with their apostolic vocation in the professional training of youth in their respective countries. And it has also been made easier due to the great hopes of the young people who participate in the contests and who, in their respective countries of origins, won the highly coveted award of being the best apprentices.

It is the rigorous selection of the participants that makes the organising work easy and provides youth with human and technical qualities which are only equaled with difficulty by other international activities of an identical or similar nature.

A fundamental characteristic distinguishes this International Competition: Here there are no winners or losers. There is, of course, the discovery of the best among the best. For this reason, as Chairman of the International Board, I wish to congratulate you all because you have all won at the beginning and at the end of the trials. The important thing here, the thing that is really worthy, is the fact of taking part, not that of winning.

I also extend my congratulations to the Organising Committee, experts, National Committee, Workshop Managers, Translators, Interpreters, helpers and all those persons, from the highest to the humblest, who have contributed with their hard and efficient work and their indispensable co-operation.

Welcome to Spain.

And many thanks to all.

foreword of the mayor

El Alcalde de Madrid

PARTICULAR

As Mayor of the City, I wish to extend my most affectionate welcome to this young embassy which, coming from the most diverse countries of the world, will be the guests of the City for a few days next July.

It is not the first time that young apprentices come to Spain for an international professional training contest. But when these contest have already acquired veteranship —the experience of fifteen previous contests— Madrid has the great honour of reiterating the hospitality which was proudly given in foregoing years by Belgium, Germany, Holland, Ireland, the United Kingdom, Italy, Portugal, etc.

And although every visitor of the capital of Spain is well received, when those who visit us are a valuable and authorised representation of the working youth of the world, who, in noble combat, conquered titles in their specialities of a professional nature, our satisfaction is greater because the presence of this youth is the best embellishment for a city which takes pride in being cordial and welcoming.

Thus, welcome to the capital of Spain that wishes this youth, in the same way as they strove to be artisans of a work well finished, a pleasant stay in Madrid and an everlasting memento of this city, with our affection. This is the wish, in the name of the Madrilenians, of the Mayor of Madrid.
